Congressman Terry worries Obama ready to nix Keystone XL (AUDIO)

January 13, 2012 By Brent Martin
Congressman Lee Terry worries the Obama Administration is laying the groundwork to turn down TransCanada's presidential permit application for the Keystone XL pipeline.

Terry points out the administration has stated it doesn't have enough time to appropriately evaluate the application and has suggested another environmental study might be needed.

"Those are all things that signal to me or I'm interpreting that he may be leaning 'no'," Terry tells Nebraska Radio Network.
