Lawmaker's bill would authorize northernmost leg of stalled pipeline http://www.washingtontimes.com/news/2012/jul/23/nebraskan-out-to-unlock-keystone/

In another attempt to move forward with the controversial Keystone XL pipeline, a top House Republican is pushing Congress to approve work on much of the northern portion of the Canada-to-Texas project that has been delayed for years.

Rep. Lee Terry, Nebraska Republican, who has taken the lead on the issue, on Monday introduced a bill that would allow completion of the northern portion of the pipeline from the Canadian border, where the tar sands oil comes from, down through Montana and South Dakota.

Click here to continue reading.