

WASHINGTON, DC – As a leading proponent of the Keystone XL pipeline, Congressman Lee Terry (R-NE) today released the following statement after reports that the Obama Administration will delay a decision on the Keystone XL oil pipeline until at least June:

“This is a transparent attempt to delay the decision on the pipeline in hopes it will fall out of the public eye. All the environmental reports have been reviewed by the State Department more than two years ago. The only new information is the Nebraska leg of the route and review of that aspect should not take more than 60 days,” Terry stated.
