

WASHINGTON- Today Congressman Lee Terry (R-NE) signed the "T. Boone Pickens' Energy Independence Pledge". By signing the pledge, Congressman Terry strengthens his commitment that our nation needs meaningful energy solutions.

Congressman Terry has also stepped up to become a co-sponsor of a resolution calling on the House of Representatives not to adjourn until it passes a comprehensive energy plan that is signed into law. Representative Thaddeus McCotter (R-MI) plans to introduce the measure today.

"We must stop the political bickering immediately and do what our country needs and deserves---adopt an "all of the above" energy plan that will lead our country to be free from our dependence on foreign oil. No more gimmicks, it is time for action. We must have a plan that involves expansion of alternative fuels like wind, solar and hydrogen, we must start drilling and we must continue conservation efforts. If we do all these things then we'll see prices go down at the pump, grocery prices will decrease and we can tell our foreign enemies we no longer need their oil," said Congressman Terry.
