

The State Department announced last week it would not allow the proposed construction of the Keystone XL pipeline to move forward. Today a House Committee reviews new legislation that would transfer permit approval for the project to the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC).

A House Subcommittee on Energy and Power is meeting Wednesday for a hearing titled, "American Jobs Now: A Legislative Hearing on the North American Energy Access Act." They are questioning witnesses on moving forward with the Keystone XL pipeline, in the face of the Obama Administrations current actions against the construction.

To continue reading this article click here .