President Barack Obama's praise for the decision to build part of the controversial Keystone XL pipeline is "like the rooster taking credit for the dawn," Republican Rep. Lee Terry tells Newsmax.TV.

"Neither the federal government nor the White House had any say in whether that could go forward," said the seven-term Nebraska Republican.

"But the fact that he applauded it showed maybe he is regretting his poor decision to kill the pipeline," Terry said during the exclusive interview with Newsmax.
