Washington, D.C. —

Nebraska's congressional delegation announced this year's schedule for the Nebraska Breakfast, the gathering held each Wednesday Congress is in session for Nebraskans to meet with members of the delegation.

"We're pleased to kick off another year of this great tradition and look forward to the give-and-take these breakfasts offer," said Senators Ben Nelson and Mike Johanns, and Reps. Lee Terry, Jeff Fortenberry and Adrian Smith. "Nebraskans have a chance to introduce themselves, tell us why they are in Washington, and what issues are of particular concern to them. All five members of the delegation are able to respond to their issues, tell them what we're working on that particular week and offer some insight as to what they might expect."
